

It's Going Well

I tend to spend the most time on front-end stuff. If I spend more time on just making the minimum viable product I could get through the stories a lot faster.

What I did today was I finished the database page I was working on and finished the details page as well. So now, a user can see their collection of Amiibos and click to see more details. It wasn't too hard to piece everything together today. I was able to link all of my templates, urls, and views together pretty easily.

Nothing was particularly difficult. Everything just took time and patience.