

Rough Start

I started off slow in this project. There was a lot of reading and trying to understand a bunch of different stuff. The project requirements alone were quite confusing to me. The project is to make an “interactive website for managing one's collections of things related to various hobbies, as well as API and Data Scraped content for those hobbies.” I needed to figure out how an API works so that I can use it and what Data Scraping is.

After some research, I decided to make an app that will allow a user to store their Amiibo information. It will also be able to show all of the Amiibos that have been released and some recent Nintendo news. My project today was to write these requirements in a file and push them to the master repository in Azure DevOps.